

MANUAL SNOWPLOW WITH A WOODEN BLADE

Abstract

5 The present invention relates to a push-type, manual snowplowing device with a wooden blade of adequate size and structure to efficiently remove snowfalls of four and one-half inches or less. The invention encompasses a manual snowplowing device avoiding the physical strain associated with shoveling while remaining cost effective, relatively maintenance free, and 10 amenable to storage and user assembly.